HEAD QUARTERS,

HALIFAX, NOVA-SCOTIA,
1st JANUARY, 1817.

NO Copy to be made from this Signal Book; nor any part of its contents made known to any person not entitled to be instructed in the Signal Duty. No writing to be put into it, or alteration made, except at Head Quarters.

This Book is to be returned to the Deputy Quarter Master General's Office, when the person to whom it is entrusted may be leaving Nova Scotia, or has retired from a situation the duties of which require its use, except in cases where it may be delivered over to the successor in Office.

W. Burford

Plan of the Halifax Telegraph: AND DIRECTIONS FOR TAKING THE SIGNALS MADE ON IT.

As many of the above Numbers as are hoisted at the same time form one Signal, and must be written down under each other, in the following order, Viz :—

1. The thousands according to the situation of the Pendant.
2. The hundreds according to the situation of the Flag.
3. The number hoisted at the east yard arm.
4. The number hoisted at the centre of the yard.
5. The number hoisted at the west yard arm.

Every numerical signal, and the first letter of telegraphy, must be answered by the Post to which it is addressed, by hoisting as one answer, and lowering as a second.

A numerical signal will always have two balls in one of the three positions, a flag or a pendant with it.

Orders and Instructions for the Signal Duty at Halifax.

1. All balls and colours composing one signal, must be hoisted and lowered exactly together therefore no signal is to be commenced until all the balls and colours which will be necessary for the signal are fixed.
2. All figures shewn under the same view, are to be written under each other.
3. Should it be necessary to fire guns to call attention to a signal of which guns compose a part, the guns which belong to the signal must be fired after the signal, in addition to those used to call attention.
4. Guns never to be fired in thick weather when the duty can be executed without ; and fog signals are never to be repeated, except by the Post which first makes them.
5. Guns "to call attention," are only to be fired when dispatch is indispensably necessary.
6. When no particular time is specified, all orders by telegraph are to be immediately complied with ; therefore doubts respecting the meaning of, or inability to comply

ON IT.

a one Signal, and

- with, an order, must be instantly notified otherwise it will be understood that the communication is clear; and in cases where a signal has been repeated, and is still not fully comprehended, a messenger must be sent to head quarters for an explanation.
7. In repeating signals from one Post to another, the first signal is not to be altered until it is accurately repeated by the Post which is to forward it, and so on with every successive one.
 8. Out Posts are to report by telegraph, all useful information which is obtained from a good authority.
 9. Officers commanding at advanced Posts are responsible that the harbour is not surprised by an enemy; to prevent which, should any number of armed ships have approached an Out Post in thick weather, or under a supposition that they were friends, or by night, a signal must be made to give the alarm; on which every preparation is to be made for action by all Harbour Posts, and all persons are to remain at their alarm posts until dismissed by authority for head quarters. As a surprise would be the most dangerous, as well as the most disgraceful thing to an officer, whose particular duty is to guard against it, too much attention cannot be paid in maintaining the strictest regularity and vigilance amongst the guards and sentinels, especially during thick weather and by night, and though false alarms should be carefully avoided, yet they had better be hazarded, to avoid the possibility of a surprise.
 10. Should any vessel pass in during the night, or in thick weather, a report thereof is nevertheless to be made the next morning, or by guns, as directed when the weather is thick or foggy.

11. When signals are made to or from distant Posts in thick weather, it is the duty of officers at the intermediate Posts to repeat the signals if possible, or otherwise send them to the place where they are addressed.
12. The commanding officer at a Post is alone responsible for the correct execution of all signals made at his Post, and also for the interpretation of such as are addressed to him.
13. All signals made by army boats or vessels are to be answered and attended to by the harbour posts; if they convey information, it must be reported to head quarters.—
See code of Boat Signals.
14. When a Post repeats signals from a vessel, the name of such vessel is to be given.

Alarm Signals.

In foggy weather, four or more guns fired quick after each other.

In clear weather, by day, three balls over a flag, at the mast-head to call attention, till every Post repeats the signal.

By night, guns and rockets alternately, until every Post repeats.

Fog Signals.

1. One gun from Fort George, is for a Boat and non-commissioned officer from each Post to repair to Head Quarters for orders.
2. Two guns fired quick—the signal for desertion.
3. When a square rigged vessel passes York Redoubt, one gun is to be fired as a signal to Head-Quarters.
4. Should a vessel be on shore, or otherwise in want of assistance, two guns to be fired quick from York Redoubt, Point Pleasant, or Sherbrooke's Tower, wherever the distress may be visible from.
5. One gun is to be fired from the Light House in answer to each gun heard at sea, as a guidance for ships endeavouring to make the port.

Night Signals.

1. Will require four lanthorns, one of which is only for the purpose of shewing the centre of the signal yard, and therefore must not be reckoned as a figure, and will make No. 4, appear thus  and No. 3, thus

2. Telegraphy by Night should always commence with a letter, requiring three numbers to describe it, in order that the person who is to take the signal may ascertain the exact position of the yard.
3. In changing from one figure to another, the lanthorns must all be moved at the same moment.
4. Great care must be taken that no lights are shewn at Out Posts, except such as are intended as signals.
5. Numerary Signals by night, are to be made agreeably to the following directions, to prevent the necessity of using two lights on the same haulyards.

1	2	3	4	5	0	in the same manner as with balls, and	1	2	3	4
							5	5	5	5
							6	7	8	9

A double light in the centre of the yard, thus  is the general preparation and will be used as No. 100, in making the number of Posts.

To make 11, repeat the one.—To make 34, first hoist 3, then 4.—To make 87, first hoist 8, then 7.—To make 128, first hoist 1, then 2, then 8, observing to hoist the centre light with the first figure, and lower it with the last of each number, which will ascertain the figures belonging to one number. Each figure composing a numerical signal must be answered by the Post to which it is addressed.

6. A night signal should always be examined at the time the answer is made to it, and if not then correct, it must be annulled.

Signal of Desertion by Night.

Four lights under each other.

NOTE. The particulars will be explained by Telegraph, early next morning, if necessary.
